Ninth (Final) Update

Pictorial Catalog of Lions Trading Pins Commemorating the AMERICAN CIVIL WAR

The pins shown on the attached pages represent the additions received since the issue of the Eighth Update.

As has been widely publicized, this is your FINAL Update to a catalog that has documented this fantastic series of Civil War related Lions trading pins. On behalf of the Pin Traders Club of Virginia and the Pin Traders Club of Pennsylvania, we would like to express our sincere appreciation for your involvement in what has proven to be the most successful series in the history of Lions trading pins. In addition, the cooperation of the Colorado Lions Pin Trading Club in developing and underwriting the costs of the data base has contributed significantly to the success of the series.

It is hoped that each and everyone of you will eventually be able to add all of the pins shown in this Catalog to your personal collection. In this connection, we would imagine that trading in this series will continue beyond this particular update.

I would like to personally thank you for your cooperation in helping to make this series the very best.

NOTE: Fearing that their sources for ingredients used in the manufacture of gunpowder, the Confederate Army resorted to all sorts of schemes to manufacture nitrates. The nitrogen found in human urine was a potential source of saltpeter, a crucial ingredient in this manufacturing process. A Rebel newspaper in Selma, Alabama beseeched the ladies as follows:

"The ladies of Selma are respectfully requested to preserve the chamber lye collected about the premises for the purposes of making nitre. A barrel will be sent around daily to collect it."

This is NOT a joke -- the ladies of the South actually preserved their "amber liquid" for the good of the cause!

The inscription on the reverse of this pin is as follows:

From the opening shots at Fort Sumter, SC on April 12, 1861 to the surrender at Appomattox Court House VA on April 9, 1865, the Civil War was the bloodiest, most tragic event in American history. There were over 600,000 lives lost during this conflict which often set brother against brother and father against son.

This pin will make a nice memento for all of us who were involved in this commemoration of the Civil War.

Pin Traders Club of Pennsylvania

This is final page of the Catalog of Lions pins commemorating the great American Civil War or the War Between the States, whichever you prefer. As we stated in the beginning, two Lions pin trading clubs, the Pin Traders Club of Pennsylvania and the Pin Traders Club of Virginia initiated this series simultaneously in 1998. Now, almost four years later, the two Clubs have agreed to bring the curtain down on what is arguably the best thing that has ever happened to the Lions pin trading community. It has been well documented on the pages of this Catalog, the fact that we have witnessed the emergence of a tremendous number of traders who have issued their very first pins and have found out just how much fun one can have when you have something to trade with your fellow traders. Although the series lasted longer than the actual war, the fun and fellowship that it generated will be remembered by many for ages to come. There's no denying that there were a few who made it difficult for us to obtain their pins, but for the most part, the ease of trading for these pins was probably the single-most important element for success of the series. The costs for the pins were relatively reasonable, and the number for each issue was generally in the range of 150. This assured most who were involved that they would not be caught with large inventories when the series ended. It would be difficult, if not impossible, to name all of those who contributed so much to the success of the series. It suffices to say that each and every trader who was involved contributed their share. Only time will tell whether there will ever be a series equal to this one.

The End
